KIWI

Kiwi is flightless birds living as adults in New Zealand. They are one of the world's most unique birds, with strong bills and no teeth. The kiwi is found almost all over the New Zealand islands.

Aepypterygia

Aepypterygia is a group of flightless birds found in New Zealand. They are typically described as kiwis.

1. BROWN KIWI - Apteryx australis

Other common kiwi names include (North Island) and (South Island). They are large birds, ranging in weight from 1.3 to 2.4 kg. Their feathers are grey-brown on the back and white on the belly. The kiwi can reach 50 cm in length. They are found in forested areas in the North Island and on the South Island.

Population: North Island, South Island

Conservation: Endangered, threatened with extinction.

The brown kiwi is one of the most unique birds in New Zealand. They are flightless and have large, strong bills. They are found in forested areas and are often found near water sources. They are known for their ability to climb trees and for their ability to camouflage themselves in the forest.